Psalm 126

In convertendo

Tone I

When the Lord turned again the captivity of Sion,
then were we like unto them that dream.
Then was our mouth filled with laughter,
and our tongue with joy.
Then said they among the heathen,
The Lord hath done great things for them.
Yea, the Lord hath done great things for us already;
whereof we rejoice.
Turn our captivity, O Lord,
as the rivers in the south.
They that sow in tears
shall reap in joy.
He that now goeth on his way weeping, and beareth forth good seed, shall doubtless come again with joy, and bring his sheaves with him.

MUSIC NOTES

This morning's Kyrie and Agnus Dei are by the prolific Flemish composer Orlando de Lassus, who composed over sixty settings of the mass ordinary. Lassus was a truly cosmopolitan composer: he spent his early life in Italy and Belgium, followed by an appointment as Maestro di cappella to the Duke of Bavaria in Munich. The beautiful double-choir Missa “Bell’ Amfitrit’ altera” was probably composed around 1580, and is based loosely on a popular song by the same title: the opening phrase of this song appears at the start of each movement.

William Byrd’s exquisite motet “Ave, verum Corpus” is taken from the Gradualia of 1605: the simplicity of the setting encourages quiet reflection upon this most familiar of communion texts.

Dutch-born organist and composer Jan Bender studied with the famed German neo-classical composer Hugo Distler before emigrating to the United States. His Triptych is emblematic of his style: dissonant harmonies are used in thin, clear textures to great effect in portraying the passion of Christ.

Johann Sebastian Bach’s legendary 200-mile journey on foot to visit the famed organist of the Marienkirche in Lübeck, Dieterich Buxtehude, sparked the initial revival of interest in the older composer: Bach’s adulation of the Lübeck master was worth investigating, and for many decades Buxtehude scholarship centered on the influence that he exerted over the young Johann Sebastian. While still acknowledging Buxtehude’s influence on Bach and others (including Handel, who also made a pilgrimage to Lübeck), performers and scholars alike now regard Buxtehude as a great composer in his own right, and not just as an influential pedagogue. The Praeludia form the core of his organ repertory and most follow a clear pattern: free, improvisatory sections that alternate with structured, fugal ones. The F-sharp minor Praeludium is typical of this form, employing a dazzling array of textures and styles: from simple textbook harmony to daring harmonic twists; from static block chords to spritely arpeggiations in both manuals and pedals.
