The Best-Beloved: Four Motets on Jacobean Poems
Chris DeBlasio (1959–1993)
[1990]

This performance is dedicated in loving memory of Harry Lyn Huff (1952–2016).

1. Psalm 63

O God, thou art my God; early will I seek thee:
My soul thirsteth for thee, my flesh longeth for thee in a dry and thirsty land, where no water is;
To see thy power and thy glory, so as I have seen thee in the sanctuary.
Because thy loving-kindness is better than life, my lips shall praise thee.
Thus will I bless thee while I live: I will lift up my hands in thy name.
My soul shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatness;
And my mouth shall praise thee with joyful lips:
When I remember thee upon my bed, and meditate on thee in the night watches.
Because thou hast been my help, therefore in the shadow of thy wings will I rejoice.
My soul followeth hard after thee: thy right hand upholdeth me.
But those that seek my soul, to destroy it, shall go into the lower parts of the earth.
They shall fall by the sword: they shall be a portion for foxes.
But the king shall rejoice in God; everyone that swareth by him shall glory:
But the mouth of them that speak lies shall be stopped. Amen.

Psalm 63 (KJV)
2. Holy Sonnet

Batter my heart, three-personed God, for, you
As yet but knock, breathe, shine, and seek to mend;
That I may rise, and stand, o'erthrow me, and bend
Your force, to break, blow, burn, and make me new.
I, like an usurped town, to another due,
Labor to admit you, but oh, to no end,
Reason your viceroy in me, me should defend,
But is captived, and proves weak or untrue,
Yet dearly' I love you, and would be loved fain,
But am betrothed unto your enemy,
Divorce me, untie, or break that knot again,
Take me to you, imprison me, for I
Except you enthrall me, never shall be free,
Nor ever chaste, except you ravish me.

John Donne (1572–1631), Divine Meditations (XIV)

3. “My thoughts hold mortal strife...” [Inexorable]

My thoughts hold mortal strife;
I do detest my life,
And with lamenting cries
Peace to my soul to bring
Oft calls that prince which here doth monarchise:
—But he, grim-grinning king,
Who caitiffs scorns, and doth the blest surprise,
Late having deck’d with beauty’s rose his tomb,
Disdains to crop a weed, and will not come.

William Drummond of Hawthornden (1585–1649)

4. “My beloved is mine, and I am his...” [A Divine Rapture]

E’en like two little bank-dividing brooks,
That wash the pebbles with their wanton streams,
And having ranged and searched a thousand nooks,
Meet both at length in silver-breasted Thames,
Where in a greater current they conjoin:
So I my Best-belovèd’s am; so He is mine.

E’en so we met; and after long pursuit,
E’en so we joined; we both became entire;
No need for either to renew a suit,
For I was flax, He flames of fire:
Our firm-united souls did more than twine;
So I my Best-belovèd’s am; so He is mine.

If all those glittering Monarchs, that command
The servile quarters of this earthly ball,
Should tender in exchange their shares of land,
I would not change my fortunes for them all:
Their wealth is but a counter to my coin:
The world’s but theirs, but my Belovèd’s mine.

Francis Quarles (1592–1644)
1. Life Is a Blessing
John Kendall, 1759, age 63, Dunstable, Massachusetts

Life is a blessing can’t be sold,
The ransom is too high,
Justice will ne’er be bribed with gold
That man may never die.
You see the foolish and the wise,
The timorous and the brave
Quit their possessions, close their eyes
And hasten to the grave.

2. Beneath Here Lies
From the grave of an anonymous mender of shoes, 1815, Weathersfield, Vermont

Beneath here lies a mender of the Sole,
Whose like you will not find from pole to pole.
By every honest means he got his Awl,
And happy could he live, tho’ in a Stall:
His Ends he answered in the life that’s past.
And now let’s hope he’s happy at the Last.

3. Reader, Pass On
Mary Lefavour, 1797, age 74, Topsfield, Massachusetts

Reader, pass on, and never waste your life
On bad biography and bitter rhyme
For what I am this cumb’rous clay Insures,
And what I was is no concern of yours.

4. Here Lies As Silent Clay
Hatfield, Massachusetts

Here lies as silent clay
Miss Arabella Young
Who on the twenty first of May 1771
Began to hold her tongue.

5. Tho’ Boreas’ Blasts
Captain E. Griffin, 1767, Madison, Connecticut

Tho’ Boreas’ blasts and boist’rous waves
Have tost me to and fro
In spite of both, by God’s decree
I harbor here below.
While I do now at anchor rest
With many of our fleet,
Yet once again I must set sail
My Admiral Christ to meet.
6. Soldier, Rest
Corporal D. Learned [Union Army], 1864, age 23, Dublin, New Hampshire

Soldier, rest, thy work is done,
Sharp the contest, fierce the strife.
The battle’s fought, the victory’s won,
Thy sure reward eternal life.

7. Come, Little Children
Mary Ann Wright, 1808, age 1 year, Hinsdale, New Hampshire

Come, little children, see the place
Where infant dust may lie;
There is no age that’s free from this:
Both young and old must die.

8. God Wills Us Free
Concord, Massachusetts

God wills us free—Man wills us slaves
I will as God wills: God’s will be done.

Here lies the body of John Jack,
a native of Africa,
who died March, 1773
aged about 60 years.
Though born in the land of slavery,
he was born free:
though he lived in the land of liberty,
he lived a slave
Till by his honest though stolen labors,
he acquired the source of slavery,
which gave him his freedom.
Though not long before Death, the great Tyrant,
gave him his final emancipation,
and put him on a footing with kings:
Though a slave to vice,
he practiced those virtues,
without which kings are but slaves.

Be Ye Broken:
Fantasy for Organ, Strings, and Voices, Op. 1191 [2017]

Carson Cooman (b. 1982) World premiere
Notes on the Music

The cause of American music could hardly have asked for a more enthusiastic champion than Howard Hanson. Throughout his long career as a composer, conductor, and educator, Hanson was absolutely indefatigable in his commitment, generosity, and enthusiasm for the contemporary music of his homeland. Born in Wahoo, Nebraska in 1896, to Swedish Lutheran immigrants, he studied at the Institute of Musical Art and Northwestern University. Hanson joined the music faculty of the College of the Pacific in 1916 as a professor of theory and composition and within three years became dean of the college’s Conservatory of Fine Arts. He was awarded the first American Prix de Rome in 1921. During his three years in Italy, he studied with Italian composer Ottorino Respighi, whose orchestration techniques influenced him greatly. In 1924, George Eastman [founder of Eastman Kodak Corporation] invited Hanson to become the director of the then-young Eastman School of Music at the University of Rochester, New York. During his 40 years at Eastman, Hanson developed the conservatory into one of America’s finest institutions of musical learning and pioneered an innovative curriculum based on his vision of American music life: integrating the “practical” instrumental study with the “academic” theory and musicology disciplines. As director of the Eastman School, Hanson held an influential position in American musical life, and he used this position to consistently promote new works of living composers. The most wide-ranging of these efforts was the series of recordings made for the Mercury label of hundreds of American works with the Eastman-Rochester Orchestra, a group made up of Eastman students and local professionals. Hanson also established the American Music Festival, a yearly presentation of works by living American composers, which continued until 1971. Despite the busy schedule of his Eastman life, Hanson produced a steady stream of musical compositions—ranging from his famous affirmation of neo-romantic musical identity, the Symphony No. 2, “Romantic” (1930), to the Pulitzer-prize winning Symphony No. 4, “Requiem” (1943), to numerous works for chorus and orchestra (his favorite genre), to the full-length opera Merry Mount (1933)—one of the first operas to be commissioned by the Metropolitan Opera. Hanson retired from Eastman in 1964 but continued both his own composing and his promotion work on behalf of American music until his death in 1981.

Perhaps because he was an excellent pianist himself [with particularly legendary score reading abilities], Hanson’s two essays in the concerto genre are for keyboard instruments—piano [1948] and organ. Concerto for Organ, Strings, and Harp, Op. 22, No. 3 (1941) begin life as a symphonic poem entitled North and West (1923). Hanson turned that work into the Organ Concerto (1926), written for the Eastman School’s organist Harold Gleason. Due to the difficulties of performing works for organ with large symphony orchestras [most organs are in confined church spaces], Hanson created this final, tighter version for smaller forces. It is cast in the one-movement episodic form that Hanson frequently employed. The opening begins mysteriously with strings and harp, leading to the organ’s subdued entrance. The main two themes of the work are presented by the organ. The second section introduces a dancing ostinato, a favorite Hanson device, leading to a development of the themes of the first section. An exciting cadenza for organ pedals alone leads to a quiet return of the opening music. The faster music returns, driving towards the vibrant coda.

Chris DeBlasio was born in 1959 in New Jersey. He was educated at New York University and the Manhattan School of Music, where he studied with John Corigliano and Giampaolo Bracali. DeBlasio particularly enjoyed working with text, and his song cycles are especially well-regarded. He also wrote a number of instrumental works, music for the theater, and several choral pieces. He died of AIDS at age 34 in 1993. The late Harry Lyn Huff (former Associate Organist and Choirmaster in the Memorial Church) served as DeBlasio’s musical executor for more than 20 years and was a great advocate for his music.
The Best-Beloved is a setting of four English poems from the Jacobean Era (ca. 1567–1625; the reign of James VI of Scotland). It was written in 1990 for the Choir of Trinity Wall Street (New York, New York) and its director, Larry King.

Alfred V. Fedak (b. 1953) holds degrees in Organ Performance and Music History from Hope College and Montclair State University, and has done additional study at Westminster Choir College, Eastman School of Music, and in Austria and England. A Fellow of the American Guild of Organists (AGO), he also holds the AGO's Choirmaster Certificate and is a member of the Guild's national Board of Examiners. Widely known as a composer of sacred music, he has over 200 choral and organ works in print, and his many hymn tunes appear in hymnals throughout the English-speaking world and Asia. The winner of numerous awards in both performance and composition, he served on the editorial committee that produced Glory to God: The Presbyterian Hymnal. He presently serves as Minister of Music and Arts at Westminster Presbyterian Church in Albany, New York; Organist/Choir Director at Albany's Congregation Beth Emeth; Chapel Organist at Emma Willard School in Troy, New York; Organist/Harpischordist with Capitol Chamber Artists; and Accompanist/Composer-in-Residence with the Hudson-Mohawk Chorale.

Last Verse: A Cycle of New England Epitaphs was commissioned and premiered in 2003 by the Octavo Singers of Schenectady, New York under the direction of George Moross. It is a setting of eight epitaphs from New England gravestones. The texts range from sardonic wit to stirring evocation. Fedak’s settings capture the mood and tone of each. The first, fifth, and sixth movements make use of early American hymn tunes.

Be Ye Broken (2017), a fantasy for solo organ, strings, and voices, takes its title from a Shaker song: "Fall on the Rock" (from the Watervliet, New York community; 1847). The text speaks of a common theme in Shaker theology: a call for humility. The individual must be humbled, with all their pride smashed and completely broken apart, so that God could then work through them.

Fall on the rock and be ye broken.
For my holy word is spoken.
Bind me 'neath the raging billows.
Twist and turn and bend like willows.

As in many Shaker songs, each line of the text is followed by “vocables” (words chosen for sound rather than meaning).

The song serves as the musical material for this work; it is heard sung by the voices at two places. The first time it is presented in an unadorned, Shaker manner; later, it occurs amidst a thick, roiling ensemble texture. Throughout the piece, the organ and strings develop the material in a variety of manners.

The general tone of this work is that of a dark intensity, and I would be hiding something if I did not acknowledge that the deeply troubling and uncertain national and international zeitgeist of early 2017 had a definite impact on the structure and mood of the piece. Abstract music does not necessarily have any inherent non-musical syntactic meaning, but an emotional landscape is something that music can reflect and map very well. It is in this spirit that I offer this piece. (Carson Cooman)

For over 175 years the Harvard University Choir has provided a unique opportunity for student singers to perform choral literature at the highest level, both in concert and during the services of the Memorial Church. Its program of daily choral services, broadcasts, tours, commissions, and recordings make it one of the premier college chapel ensembles in the United States, and each year the choir presents America's longest-running Christmas Carol Services to packed congregations. Highlights of recent seasons include concert performances of J. S. Bach's St. John Passion and Mass in B minor, C. P. E. Bach's Die Israeliten in der Wüste, Gluck's Orfeo ed Euridice, Handel's Athalia, Saul, and Messiah, Mozart's Requiem and Mass in C minor (in completions by Harvard Professor Robert Levin), Roxanna Panufnik's Westminster Mass, Alice Parker's Melodious Accord, Stephen Paulus's The Three Hermits, Benjamin Britten's St. Nicolas, and the world premiere of composer-in-residence Carson Cooman's The Acts of the Apostles. Committed to the presentation of new music, the choir has premiered works by today's most prominent composers, including David Conte, Tarik O'Regan, Alice Parker, Daniel Pinkham, Craig Phillips, and John Rutter.
