MUSIC NOTES

This morning, the Harvard University Choir presents movements from Gabriel Fauré’s beloved Requiem, in commemoration of All Saints and All Souls. Fauré studied at the famous École Niedermeyer in Paris, where his teachers included Camille Saint-Saëns; in 1877 he took over Saint-Saëns’s position as choirmaster of the Madeleine Church, where he would remain for twenty years. He also taught at the Paris Conservatoire, becoming its director in 1905, where his pupils included Maurice Ravel and Nadia Boulanger. Fauré began sketches for the Requiem in 1887, and during the early stages of composition his mother died: the first performance, which took place at the Madeleine on 16 January 1888, was a timely memorial. The work was subsequently revised and augmented a number of times, (new movements were added, and the performing forces increased substantially), but in essence it remains a comforting and contemplative musical meditation, free of the angst and torment of so many other settings.

Louis Vierne studied with César Franck and Charles-Marie Widor at the Paris Conservatory. He so impressed the latter that he became Widor’s deputy at the Grand Orgue of Saint-Sulpice from 1892 to 1900; he subsequently became the principal organist of Notre-Dame, a post he held until his death in 1937. Vierne’s twenty-four “Fantasy” pieces (1926-27) were written in homage to Bach’s great collection, “The Well-Tempered Clavier;” Requiem aeternam is dedicated to the memory of Vierne’s brother, Edward.
